

The Westminster Tanner–McMurrin Lectures on the History and Philosophy of Religion presents

Michael Walzer, PhD

Renowned American political theorist

Thursday, April 2, 2009, 7:30 PM

Bill and Vieve Gore School of Business Auditorium

Biblical Politics: The Role of the Prophets

Professor Walzer's lecture is devoted to the political role of the prophets—what it meant to talk in God's name, in public, in the gates of the city, the streets, and the temple courtyards, to a popular audience. And how is this different from (or similar to) other forms of political speech?

A graduate of Brandeis, Cambridge, and Harvard, Dr. Walzer has written about a wide variety of topics in political theory and moral philosophy: political obligation, just and unjust war, nationalism and ethnicity, economic justice, and the welfare state. He has played a part in the revival of practical, issue-focused ethics and in the development of a pluralist approach to political and moral life.

A reception and book signing will follow the lecture. Free and open to the public.
